

Residence Life

Why Live on Campus?

Students who live on campus experience our connected, secure, and supportive community. Not only is it convenient and affordable, but it is proven that students who live on campus are more successful academically.

Being a part of a residential community is being a part of a long lasting college tradition. For many students, this is where lifelong friendships and memories are made. Take this opportunity to be at the center of campus life: meeting new people, attending social and educational programs, engaging in campus employment opportunities, accessing convenient dining options, and living in close proximity to your classes, campus services, and recreational opportunities.

Our Residence Halls

Rimrock Hall and Petro Hall are both housed under one big roof along with the dining hall and bistro, Academic Support Center, the office of the Dean of Students, Student Health Services, Center for Engagement, and more. All that to say this is the center of campus life.

Each hall has very similar double bed room styles, fully furnished with everything a student may need including desks, adjustable beds, roomy closets, and countertop with a sink.

Roommates

When you are applying for Housing, you will have the opportunity to answer a series of questions about your interests, hobbies, and lifestyle. Upon completion of your application, you will be able to search other students who have applied for on-campus housing. Think of it like a match.com type of software where you can see other students with similar interests, hobbies, and lifestyles. Roommates are a great opportunity to find a new lifelong friend, but of course, you may request a prearranged roommate if you wish.

Housing Requirements

The Board of Regents Policy through Montana State University Billings does require freshmen (less than 30 credit hours) who are less than 3 years out of high school to live on campus. All students who meet the Housing Live-On Requirement must either complete a Housing Application to live on campus or an approved exemption form through our office. Students will have a Housing Hold placed on their account until an application or exemption form is submitted and approved.
